Donor Report #773-MP
Wen

Wen was abandoned when she was just an infant with a unilateral cleft lip and palate, a congenital deformity caused by abnormal facial development during gestation. The condition affected Wen's eating habits and prevented her from getting the proper nutrition she needed.

Luckily, Wen underwent a successful lip repair surgery. She is a lovely, smart and responsive baby. She would look at her nanny when she heard her name called. Wen was a hearty eater after her surgery and was the first to wake up each morning. Wen was often seen communicating with others through her babble talk and every day she would try to sit up with her nanny's help. Little Wen recently graduated from the China Care Home and is doing quite well while she awaits a loving family to call her own!
